

MRS. PASCULLI

This year, students have decided to honor Dr. Seuss as their classroom hero! To learn about Dr. Seuss, students completed an author study, which involved reading two biographies. From the reading, students learned that becoming an author was not an easy task for Dr. Seuss. Students were surprised to learn that initially, 27 publishers refused to publish his first story. Despite the disappointment of rejection, Dr. Seuss did not give up! In 1937, Dr. Seuss successfully published his first story, And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street.

To further study Dr. Seuss, students read numerous Dr. Seuss classics. Stories read in class include The Cat in the Hat, Yertle the Turtle, Fox in Sox, and Green Eggs and Ham. Following each reading, students identified the meaning or moral of each story. Classroom 104 is proud to call Dr. Seuss our 2017 hero!
