Dear Livingston Elementary Schools Families:

We hope you are all staying healthy and that your children are fully engaged in the remote learning process. We know that remote instruction would not be possible without a strong partnership with our families. We appreciate your support.

Our team of educators has been working hard each day to provide the best learning experience possible for our students under the current circumstances. The care and commitment with which our educators have approached remote learning is consistent with their ongoing dedication to our students. One of the things we have learned over the first week of remote learning is that it takes a tremendous amount of planning, organization, and preparation to deliver instruction online. Our teachers are clearly up to the task, and have risen to the occasion.

With the understanding that these are unusual times, that the need for consistency in daily routine is important, and knowing that our teachers are working tirelessly each day to deliver instruction through a new paradigm, we have decided to postpone all Parent-Teacher Conferences originally scheduled for next week. Our focus needs to be fully directed to the success of remote learning.

We hope that we will be back together at some point soon. We continue to appreciate your understanding, flexibility, and partnership.

Sincerely,
